It started with a sheep!

Owning a pet lamb "Billy" in the centre of Bristol was an experience! He grew up with our miniature Daschund and had soon remodelled our garden.

Shortly afterwards we moved to South Wiltshire where a passing friend suggested using Colloidal Silver for a skin infection. That was exactly 21 years ago! With my background in electronics, the first generator was designed & subsequently refined the process until we're one of the most respected producers in the world.

Yes, that is me above in my Bristol house and below near Shaftesbury.

Poppy came along soon afterwards along with chickens, ducks, dogs & even a horse! What a wonderful way to live your life.

Update: The Easter Bunny

Thank you to Helena for this update.

My 2 bunnies contracted the nodular form of myxomatosis. I gave them 5ml orally a day along with their antibiotics, however, I sprayed the colloidal silver directly on the nodules.

I saw drastic changes within the first 24hrs on the nodules which were on Cookie's nose and sides near his armpit. Poppy had them at her armpit and one on her ear edge.

The good thing is the one on Cookies nose I got rid of in a week and no scar left. Poppy lost a little of the edge of her ear, but the silver stopped it from progressing. It took 3 months to cure both bunnies.

Poppy is the black and white one, Cookie is the cinnamon.

Silver Aids Faster and More Accurate Diagnosis of Tumors and Other Growths

Doctors are always seeking more effective and less invasive ways to identify tumors and other abnormalities inside patients. Silver offers a solution.

To make nanoparticles brighter and last longer, a team of scientists from the Tokyo Institute of Technology 'doped' a platinum thiolate complex (a type of metal complex that contains sulfur) with silver that increases photoluminescence by 18 times. See study.

Micromotors and Silver Join to Kill Bacteria

Moving
Ag micromotors

Micromotors -- corkscrew-shaped devices that are about a hundred micrometres long and propelled by nearby magnets -- show great promise in delivering drugs inside the body as well as scooping up pollutants in wastewater.

Engineers have attached silver ions to the micromotors to test their ability to destroy bacteria. In the laboratory, stationary silver micromotors killed deadly E. coli bacteria in a petri dish. When the micromotors were moved around by magnetic fields, they were even more effective. See study.

Silver Helps Victims of 'Brain-Eating' Amoeba

CDC

Silver helps carry anti-seizure drugs to victims of a 'brain-eating' amoeba.

Silver is often used as a carrier for drugs because doctors can pinpoint a specific area of concern and use the metal to bring medicines to that targeted part of the body. For example, drugs often are piggy-backed onto silver pellets and 'shot' at the prostate gland to deliver cancer treatments.

Although it is not common, a brain-eating amoeba known as N. fowleri causes primary amoebic meningoencephalitis (PAM), a brain infection that destroys brain tissue. The one-celled animal makes its way into the brain through the nose while the victim is in contaminated water in lakes, pools and even through municipal water supplies used by people for nasal irrigation to remedy colds or mitigate seasonal allergies.
